General Tips for Cooking with Mango

Selection & Storage

 Choosing: Look for mangoes that yield slightly to pressure but aren't mushy. Color varies by variety—not all ripe mangoes are bright colored.

 Ripening: Place firm mangoes in a paper bag at room temperature for 3-5 days to ripen. Store ripe mangoes in the refrigerator for up to 5 days.

 Puree: Blend peeled mango chunks with a little water to create puree. Freeze in ice cube trays for convenient portions.

Cutting Techniques

 Cheeks Method: Stand mango upright. Using a sharp knife, cut along the flat pit on both sides to remove the two "cheeks." Score the flesh in a crosshatch pattern without piercing the skin. Push the skin up from underneath to expose cubes.

 Peel Method: Peel the mango with a vegetable peeler, then slice flesh from the pit.

 Cube Method: After removing cheeks, use a sharp knife to cut into cubes, then slice away from skin with a spoon.

Flavor Combinations

 Classic: Mango + Lime + Cilantro + Garlic

 Warm Spices: Mango + Ginger + Turmeric + Cumin

 Heat: Mango + Habanero/Jalapeño + Lime + Garlic

 Creamy: Mango + Coconut + Vanilla + Cinnamon

 Asian: Mango + Soy + Ginger + Sesame Oil + Chiles

Cooking Notes

 Heat Sensitivity: Add diced or cubed mango near the end of cooking to preserve its fresh flavor and texture. It becomes mushy if overcooked.

 Puree Sauces: Mango puree works better in cooked sauces as it maintains body and absorbs other flavors.

 Marinating: Don't marinate seafood in mango puree for more than 2 hours—the acid can affect texture. 1-2 hours is ideal.

 Sourness Balance: Mango is naturally sweet; balance with lime juice or vinegar for brightness and prevent a one-note sweetness.
